I am 62 years old and have been proud to be a Republican for my entire adult life. Our party's choice of action during the recent lame duck session has convinced me to vote Democratic for the next election. I am no longer proud to be a Republican. I am embarrassed! I believe in the will of the people and in the concept of fair play. Just because you can do something (gerrymander, strip the incoming governor of power, and rearrange election schedules to give you an unfair advantage) doesn't mean you should. Shame on you!

Please convince me to vote Republican during the next election by replying to this email. Justify how these actions represent the will of the people.
